Subject Line B: "[Company Name] - simplify your masterbatch supply chain"

Email Body

Hi [First Name],

I'm reaching out from Blau Batch - we're an Egyptian masterbatch manufacturer and authorised Coraplast distributor serving plastics producers across MENA and Europe.

We noticed [Company Name] works in [packaging/pipe extrusion], and wanted to introduce our full-spectrum masterbatch range:

- Filler Masterbatch (PE & PP) - manufactured in-house at our 6th of October facility
- White, Black, Colour & Additive Masterbatch - distributed via our Coraplast partnership
- Custom formulations - engineered to your polymer type and processing conditions

Many of our customers have consolidated from 3-5 masterbatch vendors down to one - reducing procurement complexity, improving batch consistency, and shortening lead times.

Would it be worth a 10-minute call to discuss your current masterbatch requirements?

Best regards,

Caption — FMPE vs FMPP Comparison

Filler Masterbatch: PE Carrier vs PP Carrier - which one fits your process?

One of the most common questions we get from plastics manufacturers is whether to use a PE-based or PP-based filler masterbatch. The answer depends on your application.

FMPE Series (PE Carrier):

-> Best for blown film, bags, and flexible packaging

-> Lower melt temperature compatibility

-> CaCO₃ loadings from 70% to 80%

-> Excellent dispersion in LDPE and HDPE matrices

FMPP Series (PP Carrier):

-> Best for injection moulding, raffia, and rigid packaging

-> Higher heat stability for PP processing temperatures

-> CaCO₃ loadings from 70% to 80%

-> Maintains mechanical properties in PP compounds

Both series manufactured in-house with batch-level QC, full traceability, and TDS per shipment.

Caption — Packaging Industry Focus

If you manufacture plastic packaging - film, bags, containers, or closures - here's how the right masterbatch supplier impacts your bottom line:

1. Filler masterbatch at the right CaCO₃ loading reduces raw material cost without compromising film properties
2. Consistent batch quality means fewer production stoppages and less scrap
3. Access to colour, additive, and UV grades from one supplier simplifies procurement
4. Technical support helps you optimise let-down ratios for your specific line setup

We work with packaging producers across Egypt, Saudi Arabia, UAE, and Europe.

Caption — Thought Leadership: Supplier Consolidation

A trend we're seeing across MENA plastics manufacturing:

Supplier consolidation.

Companies that used to manage separate vendors for filler, colour, black, white, and additive masterbatch are moving toward single-source suppliers.

Here's why:

-> Procurement teams spend 15-20% of their time on vendor management. Fewer vendors = more time on value-adding work.

-> When one supplier owns the full technical picture, the grade recommendations are better. No more mismatched advice from five different sources.

-> Logistics get simpler. One supplier, one shipping schedule, one invoice.

-> Quality becomes consistent. One QC standard across your entire masterbatch supply.

This is exactly the model we built Blau Batch around.

The question isn't whether to consolidate. It's when.

What's your experience - are you seeing this trend in your market too?

Caption — Before/After Social Proof

What does switching to a single-source masterbatch supplier actually look like?

BEFORE:

- 4 different masterbatch suppliers
- 4 different quality standards
- 4 different lead times
- Procurement spending ~2 days/week on vendor coordination

AFTER (with Blau Batch):

- 1 supplier covering filler, colour, additive, black & white
- 1 QC standard - batch-level testing on every shipment
- Streamlined logistics - single shipping schedule
- Technical support from one team that knows your full requirement

The transition typically takes 2-4 weeks: start with your highest-volume grade, prove consistency, then expand.

Over the past two weeks, we've had conversations with plastics manufacturers across Egypt, Saudi Arabia, UAE, Turkey, and Europe about one idea:

What if you only needed one masterbatch supplier?

The response has been clear - manufacturers want:

- A technical partner, not just a supplier
- Competitive pricing backed by in-house production

That's exactly what we've built at Blau Batch.

Our full product range covers:

- Filler Masterbatch (PE & PP) - manufactured in-house
- White, Black, Colour & Additive - distributed via Coraplast
- Custom formulations - engineered to specification

Whether you need a full masterbatch overhaul or just want to evaluate one grade - we're here.
